Law Practice:

Jason Pistacchio is an experienced trial lawyer who helps individuals and businesses with a wide range of complex personal and business issues. He prepares and enforces various agreements, including those involving financial services companies, individuals and companies. He often represents lenders, small businesses, construction professionals, and real property owners. He assists construction professionals in preparing and enforcing contracts and construction liens. Additionally, he helps commercial property owners and tenants in lease negotiations, disputes and evictions.

He is a frequent speaker and author on a variety of subjects including business entity selection, social media regulation, construction contracts, licensing requirements and liens, and electronic discovery and document retention issues.

Prior to joining Cosgrave Vergeer Kester LLP, Jason clerked for a Lane County Circuit Court Judge and completed internships at the District Attorney's offices in Lane and Douglas Counties.

Representative Cases:

Jason regularly represents large national financial services companies regarding lender and borrower claims including those relating to foreclosure of lien interests, quiet title claims, loan workout agreements and lien priority claims against other lenders, borrowers and third-parties (such as owner associations and construction contractors).

Represented a partner in a partnership dissolution claim related to the partnership's sole asset, a large commercial property complex in Portland, Oregon. The partners went into business together to acquire, construct, and manage the property. After they worked together to construct and lease it, the defendant secretly transferred title to him and his wife, then later sold the property for a substantial profit, without the knowledge or consent of his partner. Upon learning of the sale, Cosgrave filed suit and conducted discovery. As we presented our client's case during a multi-day arbitration, the defendant asked to delay further proceedings and resume settlement discussions. We obtained a settlement for our client which paid him for his share of the partnership's profits.

Represented a property owner in her claim against a developer and contractor for timber trespass. The developer and contractor, in the process of constructing a new road, removed and damaged several large trees located on our client's property. Cosgrave brought legal action against the contractor and developer for damages. After extended discovery and investigation, our client received reimbursement of her damages, including compensation related to replacement of her trees and her attorney fees

Prosecuted a claim for breach of contract and foreclosure of a construction lien related to a large-scale multi-use building project that suffered severe financial distress midway through construction. Cosgrave successfully negotiated a settlement of our client's lien claim with the developer and its lender which allowed our client to be paid what he was owed on the project.

Successfully defended an individual member in a complicated LLC dispute involving fiduciary duty claims, the distribution of the LLC's significant out-of-state real property assets, and enforcement of a promissory note.
